Didhiti Bhoumik
has more than 15 years of experience in outsourcing, vendor and contract management, operational finance, enterprise facilities strategy and program and change management in a variety of industries.

Bill Dowzer
Bill will present an international perspective of tenant led workplace transformations. This includes recent projects in Canada and Australia that centre around new corporate communities. He will focus on the emerging user requirements in corporate real estate and the growth of on demand space that tailors to requirements challenging existing leasing models.

Sheila Botting
Digital disruption is changing how and where people work, in term wreaking havoc within the workplace and corporate real estate departments. Sheila Botting, Canadian Real Estate Leader and Global Real Estate Financial Services Leader, will discuss the interconnection between real estate, talent and technology in optimizing workplace transformation to deliver outstanding results including productivity gains and cost reduction. Deloitte is transforming over 1 million sf in Canada, and more around the world, and hence she can speak to "real world" experiences.

Philip Ross
Philip will examine the way we work, whether we are engaged and energised in the office or sometimes feel that days are dominated by process and technology. Reimagining business is about waking up to a new environment, based on collaborative and flexible working, on technology that, used correctly, liberates rather than constrains. The future of work must be based on being open, on focusing on results, not process and on empowerment, not hierarchy.

Lorri Rowlandson
Leverage real time data to transform the way you lead and manage your real estate business. Reinforce and evolve the way you approach key real estate leadership topics such as: Productivity: KPIs, Measurements and Performance of Space, Change Leadership and Relationship Management to optimize your overall real estate performance and take your real estate leadership to the next level.

David Heather
is responsible for over 1,600 employees across Canada and covers all facets of human resources. He drives the Human Capital Strategy with the General Manager at Cisco, and ensures that his team drives a strong employee engagement strategy which leverages innovative and compelling interventions. This has resulted in Cisco being named the Aon Hewitt Best Employer in Canada for 2012 and 2013 and 2014. In this presentation he will look at how collaborative work environments at Cisco are allowing his people to work differently.

Tracie Crook
There is a drive for innovation at McCarthy Tetraault that never stops. Today, economic realities, client demands and the need for a more democratic environment are driving evolving workplace strategies for law firm space requirements. Learn from McCarthy's transformative leader how the firm developed a workplace strategy in support of its business objectives which shifted the firm away from a traditional hierarchical office space approach and profoundly altered the way the firm thought about using commercial real estate in creating a workplace environment that drives collaboration, innovation, client service and market leadership. COO Tracie Crook will address how the firm's ability to adapt, innovate and change is leading in the legal sector as well as effective management of the relative cultural evolution and impact on employee engagement to complement the way legal teams operate in the revolutionary and innovative workplace environment ultimately benefiting the firm's clients.

David Jones
What will we do? Where will we do it? How will we do it? Come learn about how Microsoft sees the world of work changing, and explore our vision for how emerging technologies will enable us to work together in new and better ways 5-10 years in the future.

Ian Morley

Nada Farah

Nada Farah and Ian Morley discuss the strategic workplace challenges BMO was facing and demonstrate how technology helped to both overcome them and transformed the way they supported their business.

Peter Smit
In the face of more remote work, distributed teams and pressure to improve real estate utilization, we are challenged to improve collaboration and boost productivity. This presentation will show how analytics can be applied to activity log data from the tools we use everyday, to measure collaborative performance... to the point of being able to measure whether or not your people are more collaborative in the new space.

Tracy Wymer

Sholem Prasow

Philip Ross

The Net.Work research explores how the office today is at the nexus of the social, the technological, and the physical worlds in an evermore global experience.
