Tom Savigar THE FUTURE : LABORATORY

Tom will examine dramatic shifts in workplace from multiple perspectives such as design, wellness, technology and equality. And as business and leisure become increasingly indistinguishable, will explore the shift from Big Brother-style monitoring in the workplace to a hospitality and wellness model.

Bruce Daisley

Modern work is frying our brains. We're working longer and harder than ever before but... just... getting... nothing... done. What can we do to make happier and more rewarding?

Tony Horan accenture

Tony will share key insights on the subjects of mental health, organisational culture and examining themes such as line management.

Brendan Street Nuffield Health

Why are conversations regarding emotional wellbeing and mental health, either not happening or occurring in a simplistic way?

Brendan discusses how we can improve the dialogue and reduce stigma.

Dr Almuth McDowall Birkbeck

This session outlines new research on work culture and technology. When did you last switch off? The session will be interspersed with some exercises and opportunities for interaction.

Nick Martel Parita Kansara Kate Taylor
CBRE LionHeart APC TaylorMade

Long working hours, commutes, job insecurities, financial requirements and personal demands can leave us feeling over-stretched and struggling to find any balance in our lives. Parita leads this panel exploring tools and techniques to find a better balance between work and home.

Aidan Walker

Leaders in business, education, hospitality, health - and government - are paying ever more careful attention to personal wellbeing. It can be about cranking up productivity, generating a new profit centre for guests who mistake luxury (and high-margin spa products) for inner solace, or reducing stress. For workplace professionals and designers, the driving principle is changing from Sustainability to 'Wellness'. With the 'Seven C's of Mindful Design' Aidan Walker proposes a map of the new professional and personal landscape.

Despina Katsikakis

Despina is a thought leader on the impact of the built environment on people and business performance and advises corporate occupiers, real estate developers and investment funds.

Simon Williams Transport for London

The pressures of constant change can inevitably lead to stress and impacts on health and wellbeing. This presentation will use examples from Transport for London to demonstrate how by preparing and supporting people through change it can be delivered more successfully and sustainably with fewer impacts on health and performance.

Louise Aston BUSINESS IN THE COMMUNITY

Louise will explore new thinking about how line managers are embedding mental health into organizational culture.

Adam Spreadbury BANK OF ENGLAND

Hear Adam share his own experience of mental health as well as new developments with the Bank of England's 'whole organisation' approach to the subject. With a programme including training for managers and an intranet hub, Adam outlines their success with the employee led mental health network. He will also highlight a City-wide initiative, This is Me - in the City.

Laura Jackson

How do we drive effective communities for a well and engaged workforce? With the equation of engaged = committed = productive employee, and new thinking ranging from concierge services to engineering social collisions, we explore how best to maximise our workplace environment.

Ali Ganjavian studio BANANA

Currently the single most devastating cause of productivity loss is psychological illnesses: stress, burn-out, work-related depression. In a highly-demanding professional, employees' feel-good factor is no longer a nice-to-have feature but an obligation. We will explore the notion of wellness at the workplace from different perspectives: ergonomics, social, health, mental...

Kate Cook

As the world of work becomes increasingly fast moving, with more pressure and more unforgiving, far too many of us are pushing our minds and bodies to the limit. Kate as one of the UK's leading Wellness and Nutrition experts explores how employee nutrition should lead to optimum performance and resilience. By giving employees the tools to start their transformation towards health; small changes, consistently applied create 'well' corporations that are fulfilling, engaging and profitable places to be.

Oliver Heath OLIVER HEATH DESIGN

Oliver Heath discusses new research that demonstrates how we can harness the human attraction to nature to reduce stress and aid recuperation by utilising Biophilic design principles. In this way we can make tangible benefits to the workplace including reducing costs such as absenteeism whilst improving productivity, engagement and happiness.
